Disclaimer:

The purpose of this survey is to provide the WHO secretariat with more information about how some of the main stakeholders perceive the magnitude of alcohol related problems, and what in their opinions are the best ways to deal with these problems. It will be open to organizations and departments as mentioned in the instructions, which you can find here [link to web page]. Please read the instructions carefully. By submitting ideas and comments in response to this survey you agree to abide by the instructions and accept the terms to which such submissions are subject in all respects.

The information collected is not as such intended to develop norms and standards, but may be used by WHO to analyze and report on the views and opinions of stakeholders on health problems related to alcohol consumption. Any submissions may be circulated and made publicly available by WHO, with an indication of the source. Any statements submitted should represent the views of the organization or department to which the respondent is affiliated (i.e. as opposed to representing any personal opinions). Any organizational or other misrepresentation may be checked and publicly reported by WHO.

The authors only are responsible for their submissions, and the readers only are responsible for the interpretation of these submissions, whether edited or not. In no event shall the World Health Organization be liable for any damages arising from the participation in this survey or the use of the submissions (whether edited or not).

The World Health Organization invites academic institutions, research departments, nongovernmental organizations and representatives of the industry, trade and agricultural sectors to express views and opinions to the WHO secretariat on problems related to alcohol consumption. WHO asks for the stakeholders' views on health problems related to alcohol consumption and their opinions on what kinds of interventions are needed at national, regional and global levels to reduce such problems.

The submissions should be received by WHO no later than 15 September 2006. They should preferably be done via the web, but could also be sent to us by ordinary mail or fax.

If the organization wants to elaborate on their views and opinions submitted in this survey, you can send us a position paper. Such a position paper will not be part of the main survey. The disclaimer will still be valid for all documents that we may receive from you. The position paper must be sent by ordinary mail to: World Health Organization, Management of Substance Abuse, 20, Avenue Appia, CH-1211 Geneva 27, Switzerland.
